What Was There?

We sometimes get busy in our daily routine and even travel our regular paths to work, to shop or to school. On occasion our path take us off the “beaten path” to a long forgotten “trail”. It is then we realize something is different, something is missing. A building or store that was there is no longer there.

Through the years businesses have come and gone. Sometimes the progress is good.

1. When the Carrollton Post Office relocated, the First Christian Church purchased and remodeled the property for their expansion.
2. The Coca-Cola Bottling building was taken down to build a Cultural Arts Center that serves the community with a variety of shows and exhibits throughout the year.
3. The shopping center at 401 Rome Street once housed the Colonial Grocery Store and Sears Catalog Center. It now houses the Revolution Church, Sutton’s Restaurant and Shucker’s Restaurant.
4. Several historic homes on Rome Street that were in need of repairs for years have come back to life in a wonderful way.

We will update the research on this project to include more stories and present later in the year. Your stories are welcome. Do you know of a business that has gone away?
